it is written of poetry; the it the essence orndike takes t both poetry cifist message nto the audi own sincere something the greatness at she has 10 being in this

n war was a nain business ar was to be n. Yet there em to state a ilar war en-ale massacre, or glamour. no real par ikenly to deare fighting wounded and the result is pair and bit-easier to do nything that admission of r reconciliaunced as the s. Peace, in onger sought red. Victory objective.

JECTIVE

in the last still believes still believery was not as achieved; is the build-he arena in fought; and young men hose sailing r. Korea, all r Korea, all a, Indonesia by war and, er threat of weapons an only be flict are led ke the sacribe secured. hen a large opinion is evolutionary in incalcula-l Thorndike; of art that We cannot n all see to fe and work ifism, both tood; for it that it is that orld will be

iday 2d early

Civic

PEACE NEWS

The International Pacifist Weekly

No. 745

October 6, 1950

THREEPENCE

RETREAT FROM MARGATE

Peace Council investigates Soviet charges against Tito

AS part of their efforts to counteract world-wide hate propaganda from both sides, the National Peace Council recently conducted an on-the-spot investigation of Cominform charges that Yugoslavia is preparing to attack her Communist neighbours and is supplying bases to "Anglo-American imperialists."

At a press conference in London last Sun- very bad mountain roads, and travelled for Members of the delegation present were John Lawrence, former press attache Moscow; Prof. Idris Foster, Prof. J. werys, Mr. Sydney D. Bailey, leading waker, Mr. Kenneth Ingram and Mr. tuaker, Mr. Kenneth Ingram and Mr. Morris, General Secretary of the ace Pledge Union. Unable to attend were Boyd Orr and Mr. Mark Arnold-orster, Berlin correspondent of the Man-ester Guardian who had to return to his

Their interim report states:

Hoping to obtain fuller particulars of charges, the leader of the delegation charges, the leader of the delegation that an interview with the Soviet Charge has a like in Belgrade, and, when this was the granted, he wrote both to the Soviet the delegation in Bucharest, asking for ham of the islands, ports and other places had according to Cominform propaganda, been handed over to become Anglotical bases. No answer was received there of these letters. to either of these letters.

ank replies from Yugoslavs

We travelled hard, covering over 2,000 by land, air and sea, but mostly on were given every facility that we asked for, were given every facility that we asked for were taken where we asked to go, chose our zone which is closed to foreigners. We were given every facility that we asked for, were taken where we asked to go, chose our own witnesses wherever we went, made surprise inspections of harbour masters' records, and were given every opportunity to go off by ourselves and make private en-

(Continued on back page)

DEATH OF TOLSTOY'S DAUGHTER

From Professor Edmondo Marcucci

POLSTOY'S eldest daughter, Tatiana, died in Rome on September 22. She was 86 years old. A highly intelligent woman, she was a follower of her father's ethical doctrine, a vegetarian and a peace-

It will be recalled that she wrote a letter appealing for a reprieve for Gandhi's murderers to Pandit Nehru (see PN, Nov. 25, 1949) and that she was extremely interested in the cases of Italian COs.

She was the author of many reliable biographical essays and recollections con-cerning her father.

"By-pass the governments," say Churchmen

THE PEOPLE MUST MAKE PEACE

THIS MEETING, held under Christian auspices at Friends House, Euston Road, London, asserts its general agreement with the printed appeal circulated at the meeting, and calls on His Majesty's Government to act boldly as a mediator between the American and Russian Governments, in order to end their mutual provocations founded on conceptions of power politics and do everything possible to further the will to peace of the ordinary people of all countries.

Resolution passed at " Christ and Korea" meeting.

WE are gathered here that God's will may be done, and that a force may be generated that can be used by God," said Cannon Scrutton, addressing a crowded meeting from the Chair, at Friends House, London, last Friday evening.

A printed appeal was distributed to members of the audience, discussing the present world crisis as the outcome of the rivalry between two power groups and calling upon all Christians to unite in supporting the principle that only a spirit of reconciliation can solve the deadlock.

We are gathered here to choose between reliance on armaments and on the spirit of God, Canon Scrutton continued. He did not believe that God was on the side of the big battalions; we know that Pontius Pilate had the big battalions.

ONE MINUTE'S SILENCE

Dr. Belden said that those who were responsible for this meeting were a simple gathering; a little group of Christian people who felt that the Christian protest against war was not loud enough and who wished to record an emphatic disavowal the capacity of the nation for a nation-wide revolt against war. The capacity was there; it needed information; it needed it needed information; it needed there: leadership.

It was not the will of God that man should be killed by his fellow-man, he said; and the way of war was abhorrent to God. He wished that the meeting should stand for one minute, not in remembrance, but in anticipation: anticipation of what it would mean if atomic war broke out. Let us rise, he said, to swear "It will never happen."

While the modern world stands on a "razor edge" we must remember that it is just as possible to step off on the right side as the wrong.

He hoped that a great, popular movement might arise, and that the common people would by-pass their governments. Was not the Church of the Carpenter's son the Church of the common people? Let us think of the figure of Christ and pledge ourselves to make such a peace that no government could break.

Reginald Reynolds imagined a representative of the North Koreans asking how the British justified the action which their government had taken. If intelligent, his first question might be: "Which of the Great Powers is in a position to cast the

SIX PAGES THIS WEEK

The printing trades dispute and the gas strike have made it impossible to produce eight pages this week. But there will be

TEN PAGES NEXT WEEK

for a special Birmingham Peace Week

first stone?"

We should ask ourselves: can our present position be justified and maintained by Christian means? If not, we should "cultivate our gardens." Only then would we be in a position morally to throw the first stone; and when we had reached this position, he hoped we should have enough understanding, wisdom and repentance not to wish to cast the first stone, even if we had a moral right so to do.

THE ROAD FOR YOUTH

Stressing the need to build up a Christian Democracy which should witness against social evils, Bunty Harman inveighed against racial discrimination and against the use of force.

There was abundant evidence that the young wished to commit themselves to a movement greater than themselves. They were willing to forego pleasure and give total allegiance to an idea. They had followed the false leads of Nazism, Fascism, Communism, and she wished instead they would commit themselves to the way of Christ.

WAR NOT INEVITABLE

Ethel Mannin did not know whether to call herself a Christian; but if we preferred Christianity we must obey the injunction, "Love your enemies." We did not love them by dropping bombs on them. A third World War would mean annihilation, Some of us wanted to live.

Peoples everywhere were moving to-wards the Christian Church, said the Rev. Arthur Bellwood, wondering whether she would rise to her destiny and deliver the world from its folly. If only the Church would be faithful to her Lord, then God could use it to reconcile the nations.

Mr. Bellwood said that he believed in miracles. He believed that it was possible to change the hearts of men and to change the whole Church.

The Chairman then put the resolution

the meeting, which was passed unanimously. The meeting was organised by Wallace Hancock, King's Cross Mission, Cresswell Street, W.C.1.

THIS TOWN HAS BEEN LIBERATED

(Left and right — two of the freed)

TRE: The South Korean village of Waegwan. This has been fought over several and is very nearly levelled.—Photo: Planet News.

RIGHT: Caption to this wirelessed U.S. Army picture states: "Mud-spattered and abandoned baby girl sits hungry and crying by roadside. Korean custom dictates that anyone touching the child is thereafter responsible for her care. American soldiers rescued the youngster and took care of her personally for several days until a Korean family was found who agreed to be responsible for her care. —International News Photos.

PEACE NEWS

3 Blackstock Road, London, N.4 Stamford Hill 2262

Available from Newsagents and Bookstalls, or direct from the above address.

POSTAL SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Great Britain and abroad: Three months, 4d.; six months, &s. 8d.; twelve months 16s. 6d.

WHO HAS LEARNT WHAT?

THE war is nearing its end, and one side—in this case the North Koreans-will be defeated. It will be finally settled which side were the victors. But that is all that will be settled.

What will still remain in doubt is whether the war has achieved its professed object; whether or not the thousands of conscripts and the thousands of men, women and children who have been torn apart, crushed to death or burnt alive by Christian and democrat airmen have died in vain.

That will remain undecided for some time. For the purpose of the war has been stated clearly—ad nauseam, in fact. Nobody who reads papers or listens to radios can have missed it. Here it is, for instance. in a paper picked up at random:

"A Lesson Learnt in Blood: The aggressors have learnt a terrible lessonand they have paid for it with their blood. The lesson is—Aggression does not pay. . . ."

We believe that statement to be incorrect on every point.

To begin with, whoever the aggressors were, they will not have paid for the lesson with their blood, but with other people's blood.

For it is an essential characteristic of war as a method of punishment that the people who get most and generally all of the punishment are those who have no responsibility whatsoever for the particular offence in question.

Again, assuming the North Koreans to be the aggressors (which is by no means certain, judging by all the evidence we have had time to read so far), it is the height of unreason to say they have learnt that ag-gression doesn't pay simply because they failed in this particular attempt.

All they will have learnt is that their armies weren't strong enough.

Further, the lesson could only be learnt by the aggressors if they believed them-selves to be aggressors. And this again is very doubtful. For there is plenty of evidence that the North Korean leaders believed they were about to be attacked, and were merely adopting the principle held by all militarists that attack is the best

Has nothing been learnt, then, by this costly form of instruction?

Nothing new, certainly; but one ancient popular belief has doubtless been confirmed. We may express it in the words of one famous aggressor-whose fate, by the way, taught no lesson at all to the many ag-gressors who came after him: "That God is on the side of the big battalions."

There is, however, one lesson that may have been unwillingly accepted by large numbers of people; we mean those millions of people throughout Asia who believe (in their heathen blindness) that the western democracies intend sooner or later to attack them and re-establish the tyrannies they have overthrown.

That lesson is simply this: That aggression does pay.

And their proof? That the people whom they believe (in their lamentable ignorance) to be most aggressive have just won a war in Korea.

There are perhaps a few other odd lessons which may have been picked up here and there by those, if any, who needed instruction.

One of them is that the Western democracies believe as firmly in mass murder for the vindication of their principles as Hitler did for his.

Another is that in war as now waged by Christian and pagan nations alike there is still no defence for women and children.

On the whole, however, we are afraid the war has had nothing to teach anybody except that the rulers of the earth have learnt nothing at all from all the wars of the past.

If they had, this one would not have been fought.

Commentary

THE chairman of the opening session of the Labour Party Annual Conference may be forgiven for his exaggerated optimism in calling this the century of the common man while it remains in so much danger of eventually turning out to have been the common man's half-century, with nothing to boast about to follow.

And we can also sympathise with him for taking pride in full employment, in the better distribution of national income, in increased industrial and agricultural production, in the National Health Service and other social insurance schemes, and in the high proportion of university students from working-class homes and the raising of the school-leaving age.

But the name of Keir Hardie ought to have been left unspoken in an address which went on to laud conscription and the official Labour policy for ensuring

A speech beginning with the name of the man who called conscription "the badge of the slave," and wandering through a display of social progress to arrive at approval for an expenditure of a thousand million pounds on arms, before it winds up with a quotation of political expediency.

But it is also like a nightmare animal whose head and body are monstrous in combination, with a glittering tail stuck on to induce forgetfulness of the beast's horrible

be to force up price

Road to bankruptcy incongruity.

Insult to a pioneer

ONE of the year's most important speeches within the political party in power has thus become a mess-up of incompatibles and an insult to the pioneer whom it pretends to honour.

One thing, however, even the pacifist can welcome in this speech. It halfway drops in words—and wholly by implication—the pretence that armaments avert wars. It admits that they have not done so in the past and only claims for superiority in them the certainty of victory in the end.

If war were wholly a matter of steel, and all other factors were dead equal be-tween the opponents, the infallibility of this claim would have to be admitted. But as matters stand, with differences existing in various peoples' powers of endurance and the duration and extent of the sufferings they may be called upon to undergo, and with ideologies mixing themselves up with economic factors and war aims, even this infallibility is not cortain. Let us not waste time on it, anyway, in view of the theoretical nature of the point.

By ROY SHERWOOD

Two important factors omitted

THERE are two more important factors, which this speech has left out of account. The first of them is "victory." Does the progressive diminution in its value, demonstrated in the two we have gained over the Germans within the present century not suggest that the next one cannot be worth anything at all?

The second one, dealt with in last week's front-page article of the New Statesman, concerns the already existing problem of widespread workers' discontent with present-day living conditions.

"Inside and outside the Labour Move-ment," writes that paper, " the chief concern today is not more or less nationalisation but a long list of ques-tions: Is my wage packet or my salary cheque a fair return for my labour? Is the miner too well paid in comparison with the schoolmaster or the maintenance engineer? Should we drive skill out of industry by meeting the claims of the lower-paid workers and narrowing differentials? Is the workers' slice of the national cake too small in comparison with profits? And finally, if we all try to get more, will not the effect merely be to force up prices still further?"

IT is possible to answer the last of these questions with absolute certainty: Prices are already going up, and whatever the Government may do will go up further. The Prime Minister's "We shall all have to make sacrifices" could not have come at a less propitious moment.

And the social and economic benefits proudly paraded by the chairman of the Labour Conference will look less of a worthwhile achievement month by month, as the general standard of living goes down under the combined weight of current government expenditure, interest on loans, (many of them contracted to pay for past wars), and provision for "victory" in the next war.

We have already heard of the "War To Keep The Peace." We may soon hear of Victory Through Bankruptcy.

Communist instigation unnecessary

IT is as plain as anything can be that the couraging as much strike action as they can, but equally plain that not all the present increased industrial unrest is due to their activities.

Let anyone who doubts this look at the figures of the Family Budgets, published by The Star on Sept. 28.

They concern three different families, each consisting of a married couple with two children. Of the three, "Brown and "Smith," with net incomes of £7 and £12 6s. 2d. respectively, consider themselves lucky above the average. "Jones," whose net income is £17 15s per week save notinet income is £17 15s. per week, says noteing about particular luck. But they are all equal in having practically nothing to spare, looking upon tobacco ani drink as a luxury, and finding themselves m a position in which even slight incress in the cost of living must become an alarm

If we then turn to all the thousands (or millions) who have less than £7 per week and more than two children, it is not dimcult to see how much non-Communistic discontent there is room for, wi hout awalting the foreshadowed sacrifices.

What the rearmament programme amounts to, therefore, even in the short run, is a preference for certain internal trouble to an uncertain external danger.

The full cycle of ineptitude

WITHIN the premises of power politics, Lord Vansittart is right in his advocacy of German remilitarisation and restitution of full diplomatic relations with Spain.

As he points out, neither in 1939 when we failed with the Soviets, nor later, when Hitler's invasion of Russia turned them into our allies, nor yet at any other time in our history, have we ever allowed ideological differences to stand in the way of collaboration or alliances against a common enemy.
Why should we do so now?

The glibness of such diplomatic reasoning equals its cynicism and its short-sightedness. Two wrongs may better hide for a little while, an original mistake than a single one; but they cannot make a right. The alliance with one totalitarianism to beat another, has only made the one-time ally stronger while nothing has been achieved towards all another. achieved towards all-round conciliation.

Now, faced with a more powerful and far more insinuating totalitarianism than the one beaten by an unnatural alliance, salvation is to come from another, equally tuous, bargain. If it is made, as everything now points to its being made in the near future, our wheel of ineptitude and moral Communists are instigating and en- degradation will have turned its full cycle

IMPASSE POWER THE OF

THE outstanding fact in the rearmament debate in the special Session of Parliament just concluded, was the explicit declaration that the big new power drive of the "free" nations within UNO, was the sheet anchor of world peace and humanity's one hope of survival.

against the pacifists, and as syrup for the

In the past, when wars were restricted, the declaration had some meaning, but in the era of total war and atomic bombs it Communism as a force of liberation. is a counsel of despair.

The reason statesmen do not see this is that they are too engrossed and overwhelmed with the manifold demands of an overcentralised civilisation to mediate upon fundamental issues. All they have time for is to conjure up phrases capable of alluring despairing people into the belief that the Powers that Be are masters of

In all critical periods a civilisation's greatest danger is wishful thinking. Fear, perhaps the greatest of man's enemies, is so painful that in order to escape it people will hide behind any iron curtain they can seize hold of. Today they are hiding behind the power of the United Nations, minus the Russian bloc, and the dollars and stockpiling of the United States. But who can say how long America's atomic bombs will remain unmatched by some new demonic device? This uncertain situation is a constant source of device. stant source of doubt and fear, which in a crisis may suddenly be transformed into

The important fact to register is that neither side has faith in anything but power, hence power must be increased at all costs. Among those costs are austerity and the postponement of all those rising material standards of living which are said to be the only bulwark against the spread of Communism.

Hence in the long run the Communists stand to gain most from the struggle for By Wilfred Wellock who has recently become adviser to Peace Builders, about which an article appears on page five.

military power. Besides, they are much more skilled in the black art of mindconditioning.

The struggle for high living standards has been proceeding for some 40 years. To date it has given us ten years of war and It is, of course, the old doctrine that to insure peace we must prepare for war, which is always trotted out as a defence that given the stern years of austerity due to war and unemployment. Throughout that period Communism has steadily gained in power, and all the indications are that it will continue to do so, in the Far East especially, but also in Africa, in Europe, and in the USA. The 40 years of struggle against Western Imperialism in the Far East, led by India and supported by Communism erywnere, nas premium on

This is the impasse of power from which there is no escape except in a revolutionary change in policy and outlook. We are on the road to the third world war and utter destruction, while Russia is in a position to determine the speed and nature of the conflict en route.

As I have repeatedly stated, Socialism has taken over the materialistic values of capitalism, and the struggle for the earth's resources in order to satisfy the mounting demands of high standards of living makes world reconciliation impossible. The two blocs in the UNO conflict over the Schuman plan, and American pressure over the devaluation of the £, clearly prove this.

Without the fundamental change referred to, World Government is a futile instrument. In his recent broadcast sermon, John Hoyland associated World Government with the Christian concept of Kingdom of God. That was on a religious platform. But it never comes up on the political platform, nor have I ever seen it in articles in Peace News which advocate World Government. Not until physical appetites and desires and material values are controlled by spiritual values can any escape from the mass suicide of power politics be found.

In the basic Report adopted by the World Pacifist Conference in India is this paragraph:

material, which knows no moral law has become a law unto itself. If, therfore the physical world is to be stabilised and from safe distributions the saved from self-destruction, it must be come part of a unified world order. It must, that is to say, be brought under the control of moral and spiritual law.

The realisation of this truth involves personal and a social revolution, since the Social Order must be re-organised in human person, who is increasingly becoming the disintegrated mass man, is achieve wholeness.

There lies the challenge to present-day pacifism, and we must either accept it or remain a powerless and ineffectual part of the confused and all the confused and all the confused and all the confused and all the confused are the confused and all the confused are the the confused and chaotic complex which we call Western civilisation that is now hastening to its doom.

It thus transpires that the impasse at which the nations not root the impasse of materialism.

Hence our problem is fundamentally spiritual; it cannot be resolved at materialistic level, and at present, neither the State nor the Church, nor even pacifism is proposed. fism is prepared to face that fact.

*Gandhi as a Social Revolutionary, p.32.

AFTER THE HOLIDAYS

ONE of our Manchester members writes "As I have still a little cash left after I enclose returning from the holiday, I enclose 10s. note as a donation to Headquarters

This leads me to hope that there will be others also who may have a little to spare which they can send as a thanksgiving for their holiday their holiday.

The work of the PPU has to continue all the year round and it will be a great en-couragement to find that after the holidays there is a spirit of round determination there is a spirit of renewed determination to increase our activities in the coming autumn months.

STUART MORRIS General Secretary.

Total received to date: £383 11s. 5d.

Donations to the Peace Pleage Union should be sent marked Fund," to the PPU Treasurer at W.C.1.

Touay the world is in chaos. Its should be sent marked Fund," to the PPU Treasurer at W.C.1.

Sheppard House, Endsleigh Street, W.C.1.

TH tries tenand vation stress pacifis Prasac Opinio Whil Securit Korea, an inde promot determ tives. need o

This

Nehru

the In

Chinese

admitte said, n includi Korea, have I must by the recogn either ent Ko ments, did no firm t of the Polic

Belgia ment, spons Defer the 1 Unite protec man. Colla force a an Ar writes,

ing fo What of Pea

their

Russia Nation comma place . Tho force posal admit of Cor bring zens o will b morta

Nex under Scien Dr.

mende

of mi

tration

As fre both tion, encirc agree destru Atlan of his And pointe grated United the F truction Poi Peac Natio: War, we ha counti

Korea Soul desci

can 1 has ; the 1 Bot

says, foreig Under

action as they not all the prenrest is due to his look at the ts, published by erent families, ed couple with "Brown" and es of £7 and ider themselves 'Jones,' whose reek, says noti-But they are illy nothing to ani a raie ting themselves slight incr. . se come an alarm thousands (or 1 £7 per week it is not diffmmunistic diswi hout await-programme in the short ertain internal nal danger.

ıde power politics, it in his advoation and the relations with 1939 when we r later, when rned them into er time in our ed ideological y of collabora ommon enemy.

atic reasoning its short-y better hide, mistake than make a right itarianism to the one-time g has been onciliation.

verful and far ism than the lliance, salva-, equally toras everything le and moral its full cycle.

ioral law has
If, therfore, stabilised and it must beild order. It ought under ritual law."

h involves a on, since the mised if the ingly become man, is to present-day accept it or ctual part of lex which we now hastenimpasse of at are, is at sm.

indamentally ved at the sent, neither r even paciact.

nary, p.32.

AYS bers writes: sh left after I enclose a leadquarters

here will be tle to spare ksgiving for continue all a great en-the holidays termination the coming

MORRIS I Secretary.

13 11s. 5d.

dge Union eadquarters r at Dick reet, W.C.1-

Hope of Survival

PACIFIST

PARADE

THE necessity of co-operation among independent countries of Asia for the maintenance of peace and the preservation of their own freedom is stressed in a speech by India's pacifist President, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, reported in "Indian Opinion."

Whilst India had supported the Security Council's two resolutions on Korea, she would continue to pursue an independent policy based on the promotion of world peace and determined by her ideals and objectives. "Peace remains the paramount tives, "Peace remains the paramount need of mankind," said Dr. Prasad, and its one hope of survival."

This view was endorsed by Mr. Nehru in another reported speech to the Indian Parliament. If the Chinese People's Republic had been admitted to the United Nations, he said, many subsequent developments, including those in Korea, might well have been avoided. The future of Korea must be settled by the Koreans. In-dia had refused to recognise officially either of the pres-ent Korean governments, because she did not wish to confirm the artificial, military division of the country.

Police for Peace?

LETTER from Baron A. A Allard, President of the Belgian "Stop War" movement, to the Communistsponsored Union Belge pour la Defense de la Paix, discusses the possibility of creating a United Nations police force to protect justice and the rights of

Collaboration with such a police force as at present constituted under an American commander would, he writes, be impossible for those workwrites, be impossible for those working for a single, world government. What was to prevent the "Partisans of Peace" in Europe from organising their own "police force" under a Russian commander? The United Nations should demand a neutral commander for its police force, in place of General MacArthur. place of General MacArthur.

Though circumstances seemed to force us to put our lives at the dis-posal of one of two evils, he says, to admit the division of East and West, of Communism and capitalism, would bring disaster on all humanity. Citiof the world must express their will by refusing to take part in this mortal combat. "We stand for arbitration, and not for a bloody victory."

Next, please!

THE question of a policy of neutrality has also been under discussion in the American "Bulletin of the Atomic

Dr. Leo Szilard, professor of biothysics at Chicago University, recommended a cutting of the apron strings of military alliances with America. As free and independent neutrals, the Atlantic Pact countries could resist both American and Russian occupation, thus reducing Russia's fear of encirclement. A French chemist agreed that there is "more risk of destruction than hope of safety in the Atlantic Pact," adding that the heart of his country was not in it.

Another Frenchman, the Catholic philosopher Dr. Etienne Gilson, pointed out that France was not ungrateful or antagonistic to the United States, but "it's simply that the French prefer France to destruction."

Pointing the moral of Korea,
"Peace Action," organ of the U.S.
National Council for Prevention of War, comments: "What a martyrdom
we have permitted for our ally! All countries that want to be other Koreas please step forward."

Sounding Brass

PEACE through power" is how "Peace Action" describes the attitude of American militarists; an attitude that has gained a disastrous hold on the nation's policy.

Both during and since the war, it says, the army has blundered over foreign policy, and quotes the former Under-Secretary of State Sumner Welles: "No President since General Grant has had such childlike faith in the omniscience of the high brass as the present occupant of the White

In Korea, the head of the American military mission had predicted some limited action by the Communists, with the comment that "at this stage we rather invite it," and adding "it we rather invite it, and adding it will give us target practice."

The question is, says "Peace Action," do they have the balanced, all-round judgment to formulate sound policy on grave issues of state?

"The record says 'No.'"

League for Freedom

CORRESPONDENT sends A details of the Australian anti-militarist League for Freedom, an organisation that declares:

"None of the Great Powers now engaged in the armaments race has higher motives than a fight for power and economic domi-nation, and there are among them no 'peace loving governments. support none of these Governments but extend the hand or irrendship to all genuine peace-loving and antimilitarist organisations in all countries."

The League by of friendship to all

The League has conducted a valuable survey of the "peace tendencies" among the Churches.

dencies" among the Churches.

Though on the whole "militarism has had no more valuable allies than Christian Churches and Christian ministers," active groups of peacemakers have been found among Methodists; Roman Catholics; the Church of Christ (which is opposed to military service); Unitarians; and Jehovah's Witnesses.

The League also draws attention to

The League also draws attention to "The Quest for Peace," a book by the late Eleanor Moore, well-known the late Eleanor moore, which has talk and to the monthly journal of the Federal Pacific Australia, "The fist Council of Australia, Peacemaker."

Trump Card

W ORLD domination is not a new idea, though it is constantly recurring in new guise.

Who will finally dominate the world? During the German occupation of France Field Marshal Goering had said: "It is a question of knowing if the world will be dominated by the Jew or by the German."

A different answer was given by the organisation known as "Les Braves Gens de France." It will be dominated, they said, by the spirit of the commandment: "Love one another."

In reply to Goering, in 1942 a card was printed and circulated showing the world intersected by a Cross. The Gestapo ordered the banning and confiscation of all propaganda of the "Braves Gens," and their secretary was arrested. But after three days he was released through the efforts of the French police who declared him to be an "illume," or spiritual leader.

News of COs

THE case for recognition of conscientious objection in France is being pressed by Quaker organisa-tions (reports The Friend).

A letter to the President from the European Section of the Friends World Committee for Consultation expressed the hope that France would "rejoin the family of those nations which honour the rights of conscience" and urged prompt consideration of the Bill providing for alternative ser-vice for COs, which has been sponsored by seven members of Parliament. A second letter from the French Quakers argues the case more fully, and points out the scandal of the present "cat-and-mouse" of the present treatment.

Reservists

THE September issue of "The Objector" gives advice to exservicemen now on the reserve who may wish to register as COs.

The only action which can be taken at present, it states, is to send a registered letter to the officer in charge of records of the appropriate service department (keeping a copy for reference), informing him of the decision not to serve again, or to accept only non-combatant duties.

But it is advised that all reservists in this position should be put in touch with the Central Board for COs (6 Endsleigh Street, London, W.C.1.), so that they can be informed of any change in procedure.

MARGARET TIMS

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Anti-war speeches — against

N your issue of September 22 a great deal of space is devoted to speeches in Parliament by Mr. Emrys Hughes and other MPs who oppose the Government's rearmament policy.

The reporting of these MPs at such length is apt both to mislead Peace News readers as to the importance of their speeches and to delude the MPs concerned into believing that they are furthering materially the cause of peace.

The fact is that anti-war orations in the Commons can have little effect. Mr. Hughes and his similarly-thinking brethren are unlikely to convert the Tory Party leaders to Pacifism or Neutrality; there is even less prospect that they will deflect the Labour Party caucus from its purpose of military alliance with America in the coming US-Russian war.

With the abundance of political and other jobs available in return for party loyalty, the trade union and Labour leaders can count on the docility of a great majority of their followers in Parliament.

Mr. Hughes and other MPs with similar opinions will render a much better service to peace and national sanity if they abandon the House of Commons for the constituencies and make there the speeches which are at present merely providing work for the Hansard reporters.

JAMES MOONEY

21 Carrs Crescent, Formby, Liverpool.

- and in favour

CONGRATULATIONS to the Pacifist MPs for their fine efforts in the Commons, and to Peace News for giving them publicity whilst the National Press was devoting its pages to murder trials and armchair sports.

If there was ever a justification for increasing the circulation of Peace News, the present-day National Press provides the complete answer.

DENIS BRIAN

24a Breakspears Road, Brackley, S.E.24. The Lesser Evil

TAY I be allowed to reply to my fellow townsman, whose letter under the heading, "The Lesser Evil," appeared in your issue of September 15.

Accepting that his analogy, although highly improbable, is not impossible, I would reply as follows:-

1. The signalman is not a willing and active participant in creating the conditions which comper him to choose between the deaths of two groups of people. Those taking part in war are constantly creating conditions which lead them to make sucn a choice.

2. No railway signalman takes on his job with the remote idea that he will called upon to make such a choice. Death is part of the normal conduct of war and participant might reasonably expect to have to choose between the deaths of two groups of people. The simple choice of his life or mine is part of military train-

3. Whatever the signalman's choice the result could be estimated within reasonable limits: with the choice before President Roosevelt the result was incalculable in view of the nature of the new weapon.

4. The signalman would have no chance of taking steps to alter the conditions which make such a choice necessary. Probably most of such occasions in wartime, and certainly in the case of the atomic bombs on Japan, the choice is made after much de-liberation with plenty of time to attempt to alter the conditions so as to make the choice unnecessary.

From this it follows that the analogy is not a true one. I think that the fallacy is clearly shown by the different nature of the choices to be made — the signalman would have to choose a course of action which would prevent a greater amount of suffering; President Roof relt had to choose a course of action which would create a smaller amount of suffering.

In his evaluation of this problem 1 think that Mr. Binder misses the vital point. Even if a man is faced with two evils, one of which is inevitable, he need not choose either. He can act for good. The signal-man would be acting for good in preventing some of the inevitable suffering, President Roosevelt could have acted for good in trying to arrange an armistice with Japan. FRED NICHOLL

14 King William Road, Kempston, Bedford

TOLD BY THE MARINES

THE Daily Mail reported recently that President Truman was in hot water with Congress because of the uncharitable remarks he had made about the Marine Corps, America's "elite" troops now fighting in Korea.

The trouble arose because the President said: "The Marine Corps have a propaganda machine that is almost equal to Stalin's.

The President did not, apparently, mean by this that the Marines have been inciting ignorant native people to red revolution. They have not, like Stalin, been showing the Kurds the Way. Nor have they, like the diabolically clever Soviet propagandists, been trying to convince well-ted peoples of Asia that Western Democracy has brought only poverty, starvation and disease to the masses of the East.

High-pressure American sales methods are, according to the Marine Corps, too good to be wasted on barbarians who understand only warships and imitation jewellery.

No. The Marine Corps has not been try-East. It has been trying to sell the Marine Corps to the Great American Public.

The President's remark was "a sarcastic reference to the strenuous efforts the Marine Corps have been making to secure an increase in their strength and funds."
And Mr. Truman added: "The Marine Corps are the Navy's Police Force, and as long as I am President that is what they will remain."

One gathers that the President could think of nothing lower than a police force to call any body of men and if the American films we have seen are anything to go by, we can only agree with him.

No details of the Marine Corps' publicity methods are given, but it seems probable that the Marines have been returning to the public some of the tall stories that have from time immemorial been told to the Marines. If this is so, "told by the Marines" is a phrase that may well enter into the treasury of popular mythology.

But the Marines have champions to defend their honour. "I am filled with sadness that the President should speak so contemptuously of such a great body of men," said one Senator; "It seems inconceivable that the President should compare the Marine Corps with the most corrupt, dishonest and dishonourable propaganda machine in all history," said another.

So do records come and go. Dr. Goebbels is already surpassed. In passing, it may be noted that this description of the Russian propaganda machine, given by an American and reported in the "Daily Mail," is an admirable example of the pot calling the kettle black within the precincts of the kitchen grate.

It should not be forgotten, however, that the President may have been misunder-stood. His remark may not have been intended sarcastically at all.

Mr. Truman is, we understand, a simpleminded man, and in suggesting that the Marines were "corrupt, dishonest and dis-honourable," he may have been paying them the highest compliment he knew. For it is obvious that a military force that was pure, honest and honourable as the driven snow would be mighty little help in a cold war and in a hot war would be as much help as a rounders team or a copy of the

New Testament.

In this case the really insulting part of the President's speech is that which says that the Marine Corps' propaganda machine is only almost equivalent to Stalin's. If this is true, the Marines must pull their gaiters up.

Perhaps they will be inspired by the efforts made by those responsible for British recruiting propaganda. The most careful perusal of their literature and posters issued by the British Government to entice those who want to become advantu 17½, reveals no single indication of what an army, navy and air force are really intended for.

People reading these recruiting appeals may be forgiven for assuming that the armed forces exist solely to supercede the Ministry of Labour and the Ministry of Health by providing vocational training for a job for life and an unparalleled scope of social welfare.

We are proud to think that Stalin dare not present a propaganda as corrupt, dishonest and dishonourable as this to the illiterate Soviet hordes. We are even prouder that the propaganda has had such an effect on recruiting that the Government is now compelled to pay a living wage for

The Marine Corps can also learn from Stalin, even in the matter of recruiting. For Stalin relies largely on two things to bring fodder to the Soviet armies: the low economic standard of masses of people of the world, and the constant threats made by patriotic Americans and Britains to drop atom bombs right and left, especially left.

The Marine Corps should plug the line of higher wages it offers to those civilians made almost bankrupt by having to pay for the Marine Corps. And any armed service offers a comparatively safe refuge to citizens who know that atom bombs are more likely to be dropped upon cities than upon an army.

With the examples of Hiroshima and Bikini in mind, it is difficult to know dropped whether the next atom bomb will be dropped on land or on sea. The Marine Corps, being amphibious, stands a good chance of dodging it either way.

CYRIL HUGHES

The speaker

or religious 1

Firstly, he agion. The valeligion was tosmology, ar

purpose and 1

Men could

lequisite—wor

hat the unive

the expres

He doubted

Materialism v

iniverse as a GKO said, "A

Religion to e lived in ar

do without re

niverse; try

Bide himself.

laviour withc

There were,

han did rega

e, operating

or control—na

Ethics alone

Ethics, on a separate

miversal app

That was

was behaving

ois own surp!

aw was abs

Men were

at ethics w

ut religion without auth

If morality man, then m

characteristic believe in h drama of or

pitying moa face of force

This princi

had been ta

wrong way, as something

something an just to F deals to thi when we wa The speak ary, Christ

exorable, s

anse and ef

nce of the

There was to select we nevertl

late Send 1
2. than I Place (hall, event; speal

that order

Frid
LONDON. W
London. W
London. W
London. W
London. The Re
Liverpool
Liverp

Satu

SAUU SOUTTINGHA
Some Friar I
Pacifism.
Brown, Hill
Storm, NonLand, Storm, NonLand, Non

Sur

Frid

power,

moral the

cience.

ETH

By CORDER CATCHPOOL

STILL young newcomer amongst the Peace Movements, born in Liverpool soon after the end of the war and christened "Toldas," paid a first visit to London on Wednesday, Sept. 20, when members of various peace organisations and of the general public had the opportunity of making its acquaintance.

Toldas means Total Disarmament and Active Security, and its founder is Dr. Alan Litherland, of 5 Parkway, Great Crosby, Liverpool 23, who explained what the Movement stood for; and probably most of the one hundred or so people present at the smaller Holborn Hall same in total the smaller Holborn Hall came in total ignorance and some curiosity as to this rather mysterious sounding term. elucidation, many may have asked themselves whether there was room for an entirely new Peace Organisation, or for the founding of branches in London, which was the primary purpose of the gathering.

It was at least not easy to see where else Toldas could be fitted into the existing framework of the British Peace Movement, after listening to the explanation of its aims and meaning, presented by the clear and capable mind of Dr. Litherland. It claimed, and (pace Lord Boyd-Orr) seemed entitled to a separate niche of its own.

For Toldas is not an exclusively pacifist body, nor a secifically religious one, nor does it approve an individual pledge. That precludes the possibility of its merging with the Peace Pledge Union, Fellowship of Reconciliation, Friends' Peace Committee, or with any other of the acnominational Peace Fellowships; standing for total disarmament, entrance to UNA, Federal Union, Union of Democratic Control and the like is barred to it, and its programme being political but not party political, a merger with the Labour Pacifist Fellowship would be ruled out, even if not already disqualified by LPF pacifism.

THE

We can only hope that Toldas will grow rapidly, and quickly qualify for the right to affiliate with the National Peace Council, so finding cover and helping to support our National Peace Umbrella.

Human rights—how?

On the platform at the Holborn Hall were three distinguished scientists, Professor Kathleen Lonsdale, FRS, Professor Charles A. Coulson, FRS (chairman), and Dr. Alan Litherland.

The first-named was the principal speaker. She defined and illustrated the meaning of democracy in the western sense, as embodied in the Declaration of Human Rights.

How could these Rights be secured? Not by military power; the cry for security of that kind indicated middle-age-mindedness. Expenditure on armaments meant reduction of expenditure on education and living standards, restricting any extension of the essential Freedoms.

It was the general view that without military defence Western Europe would be over-run by Russia and subjected to en-forced Communism. "I don't believe that forced Communism. "I don't believe that is true," declared Prof. Lonsdale, citing Finland where she had many contacts, as one of the most democratic countries in the world, yet in the orbit of her powerful neighbour the USSR. Communism was much more likely to flourish in Eastern Asia as a result of poverty. Collective Security is unsound, because armaments provoke armaments, and because would-be aggressors are usually gamblers, prepared to take risks. Defeat would merely convince them that they were not lucky or clever enough.

Total Disarmament was also a gamble, the speaker admitted; but our Government had taken risks in making such generous gestures as the liberation of India. We must make still bigger and bolder experi-

Sow friendship and you would reap peace. This is the "AS" of Toldas. Active This is the "AS" of Toldas. Active Security as contrasted with the supposed security of armaments.

It is a noble challenge, which we accept above all minor differences; a task surely shared by all pacifists, who must be pre-pared as individuals and as groups to stake their all upon it.

It means total disarmament and at the national-political level means setting out upon the terrific enterprise of convincing the whole nation of the Truth enunciated so courageously by Kathleen Lonsdale, be-fore any practical political action can be taken upon it.

Sir Hartley answers Dr. Soper

On the day following the Toldas meeting, Sir Hartley Shawcross, Attorney General, expressed what is probably the governmental and perhaps the entire national viewpoint outside pacifist circles, when he said in a speech at Cam in Gloucestershire on Sept. 21 "Sometimes sincere and thoughtful people think that the horror and devastation of a world war now would be so frightful, whoever won, that it would be better to submit to Communist domination. I can understand that view, but I repudiate it."

On the same day a leader of the Peace Movement in this country said, with reference to the building up of military might in the interests of the UN and U.S. Collective Security policy, that their case was logically quite unanswerable, except from the pacifist standpoint? Toldas, however, knows where it stands; and has no doubt counted the cost.

Despite difference in policy and emphasis, all pacifists will bless the efforts of Toldas, will wish it every success, and will co-operate as far as strength and prior affiliations allow.

"I hope no one would 'liberate' us"

-- Rev LEWIS MACLACHLAN

The North London Peace Centre at 3 Blackstock Road, Finsbury Park, was declared open on Sept. 23, at a garden party and celebration held at Holloway Friends Meeting House.

ECLARING the Centre open, its honorary president, Bernard Boothroyd, Editor of Peace News, said that when he lived in South London he believed, with the logic of true patriotism, that North London was an inferior place.

He had since modified that opinion, and today he believed North London was setting an example to the whole country by launching a new campaign at a time when the pacifist movement badly needed renewed enthusiasm and vitality.

We are being judged

Addressing an indoor meeting which followed, the Rev. Pat Figgis stressed the need for tolerance, often forgotten in the zeal of propaganda.

Illogical as it might appear, many people judged a cause by the followers of that cause; and pacifists were being watched and judged.

He urged pacifists to face up to the full implications of their creed. To follow the pacifist way might mean drastically reduced standards of living, occupation by a foreign power and tyranny.

On the other hand, they must realise that to many people war preparations seemed to ofter hope of what they immediately desired - better material conditions; and the way of war was more attractive than ever.

The Truth about " liberation "

The Rev. Lewis MacLachlan, Editor of "Reconciliation," said the worst feature of wars was that they completely ignored the people involved in them.

Just now we heard only of the wicked North Koreans and the noble stand against them by the forces of the United Nations. It was only afterwards that we would learn of the social disintegration and the personal sufferings of the refugees. only afterwards, when we saw the whole picture, would we realise that the war ought to have been fought.

He felt intense pity for the poor Koreans who had to submit to this dreadful process called "liberation."

It reminded him of the story of the four boy scouts who, reporting good deeds for the day, all said they had "helped an old lady across the road."

"But look here," said the Scoutmaster,

"do you mean it took four of you to get the old lady across the road?"
"Yes, sir," was the reply. "You see,

she didn't want to go.' He thought that a fair example of how "liberation" worked. The people concerned were not consulted. And he devoutly hoped that if at some future date we found ourselves occupied by the Russians, no other nation would think it their sacred duty to come and liberate us.

The One-ness of life

Swami Avyaktananda, one of the leaders of the Vedanta Movement and Chairman of the recent Conference of World Religions, said he thought one of the tasks of pacifists was to study those non-violent means by which the ideal society could be brought about, and to propagate those ideas which underlay all the great faiths in the world.

He spoke as an individual pacifist who had signed the Communist Peace Petition because he believed that all attempts at peace should have our moral support.

He emphasised the common life under-lying all forms of life, which was a spiritual as well as a biological truth, and said the new social order we needed must be based on that central truth of the one-ness of all life.

The task for such peace centres was to study how to create the demand for both spiritual and economic democracy, in a system as comprehensive as Marxism. Capitalism could not exist without exploitation, but he believed a public opinion could be created which would demand a Gandhian society.

David Garside, a schoolmaster and initially secretary of the Centre, gave his own personal testimony for peace, describing his enlistment in 1939, his conversion to pacifism and refusal to continue serving in the Army Education Corps, and his subsequent court-martial and four years' imprisonment.

Geoffrey Thompson, Chairman of the Centre, appealed for support for the new venture which, besides providing fellowship and a meeting place, gave opportunities for the training of speakers and the spreading of propaganda.

During the afternoon there were side shows in the garden, including gift stalls, bookstall and a very competent palmisi-Madame Marita (otherwise Margaret Bing ham), and in the evening refreshments were followed by a concert.

This included a special "Peace Centre Anthem" with words by Gerald Massey and music by the Rev. Eric Rees of St. Anne's, Finsbury Park, and sung by Anne's choir. Solos were given by Alison Baker (anthem), Duncan Irving (piano), Joan Armstrong (soprano) and Eric Rees (baritone).

Sybil Morrison at Lincoln's Inn

Peace News Reporter

EVERY Thursday, cloudy or fine, Sybli Morrison stands on the steps of drinking fountain at a corner of London's Lincoln's Inn Fields, expounding the pacifist case, and answering questions from the crawd from the crowd.

Several hundred people are always there; mostly men, and mostly from offices in the vicinity. Many of them are regular attenders who always them are regular attenders who always them. attenders, who always spend their Thurs day lunch-hour in this fashion.
This is no orderly public meeting. Without a chairman to call upon speakers, people shout and interrupt each other, but Sybi manages to keep them reasonably well mannered with a mixture of good humour and force of personality.

She also has that attribute of a good open to the state of the state

air speaker, second only in importance a carrying voice; she can turn a vaguely phrased half comment, half question into a theme for a short speech on any topic that the member of the crowd likes to take up any property of the crowd likes to take up any property of the crowd likes to take up any property of the crowd likes to the crowd likes take up, anyways relating her remarks to the pacifist case.

KOREA

Last week Sybil started on Korea. She was asked whether she believed that the published lished results of the spring elections in Korea, which stated that 90 per centre the South Koreans polled an anti-

Communist vote, were accurate.

Elections which took place under a foreign occupying power were not valid in Sybil's opinion. Only if the armies of the laws of th and Russia were removed could you have proper elections in Korea.

proper elections in Korea.

She was prepared to argue that no European power had ever given anything of value to the Far East. Cries of "Here," from the crowd. The Communists were accepted because they did offer something different from naked economic exploitation. exploitation.

MOSCOW

Later she was asked why she did not go and speak in Massey speak in Moscow, Sybil asked the questioner whether, if he was giving a jecture on the management of his husiness, he on the management of his business, would say him would say his firm was perfectly honest, or whether he would say if they could get the firm over the say if they get the firm over the road to conduct its business in an honourable fashion then he would follow suit?
Why," she said, "should I go to Moscow before I have converted all the people

INDIA

The centre of interest then shifted to India. Clive did not go there to make a nation of the Indian but because there nation of the Indians but because there was profit to be had there Sybil said oticeable feature of There is necting Noticeable feature of Thursday's meeting was that the main body of the crowd was that the main body of the crown seemed to be on Sybil's side. So much so that at one point, when she confounded a questioner in the illogical toils of her own argument, the crowd cheered her and when one man shouted out that we and when one man shouted out that tigal and when one man shouted out that we had educated India, Sybil's sceptical expression was echoed by yells of derision from the audience. from the audience.

IRENOUNCE WARAND I WILL NEVER SUPPORT OR SANCTION ANOTHER

This pledge, signed by each member, is the basis of the Peace Piedge Union. Send YOUR pledge to

P.P.U. HEADQUARTERS Dick Sheppard House, Endeleigh St., WCI

AGGRESSION, APPEASEMENT AND PEACE

Peace News Reporter

MANCHESTER ROFESSOR Kathleen Lonsdale,

speaking at Friends House here on Sept. 18, took for her subject "Aggression, Appeasement and Peace."

The First World War was "a war to end war"; it failed. The Second World War was to save democracy; it did not. The Third World War now going on in Korea, was to end aggression; we are entitled to question whether it will.

In a democracy the minority was not only recognised, it was integrated into the system, vide the Government and Opposition in Parliament. Was a minority entitled to overthrow a corrupt majority?

China and democracy

China had never been a democracy; the choice lav between two totalitarian regimes: the honest and efficient Communist Government, which was chosen by most of the people in preference to the dishonest and corrupt Nationalists.

To most Chinese this was liberation, and as they had recognised this Government it should be recognised by us and replace the Nationalists in UN councils.

Before the Korean war, the UN had been paralysed by U.S. refusal to recognise this, and since the Soviet walkout, U.S. policy had met with no opposition in the UN, resulting in no representation for Eastern peoples.

Annexation or appeasement?

Soviet annexation of Korea might represent a legitimate expansion of her largely ice-bound coastline, but modern conditions made such expansion a danger to peace. Could we only stop it by force or appeasement, Prof. Lonsdale asked?

The admittance of China to the UN was regarded as appeasement but it was not; appeasement meant saving your own skin at the expense of someone else's.

A settlement must be made in the interests of all Korean people, and other Asian opinion, Indian, Pakistan and Bur-mese, must be satisfied. Such a settlement must be worked out now while the tide was running in our favour.

Gamble for peace

The problems of peace were to find a way for opposites to live together and to avert world famine. It was to our mutual advantage to live rather than to die together, which was the present system that the threat of war was only consolidating.

Rearmament was a gamble on power; we must gamble on love.

We needed £1,750 million a year to offer a concrete alternative to Communism in the Far East; President Truman's fourth point only offered £7 million.

Mr. Attlee had said that we must take risks for peace. The real risks were experiments in friendliness and co-operation: they had never yet been made, but without them we can never hope to achieve real peace.

MEETING BRIEFS

PLYMOUTH: Reginald Reynolds will speak on "The Constructive Programme of Mahatma Gandhi" at Friends House at a conference to be held there on Oct. 7 and 8. On the second day the subject for discussion at 2.30 will be "The World Pacifist Conference in India."

ENTRAL LONDON Group of the Peace Pledge Union had four meetings during September, the first being a Social Evening at which Nancy Edmonds and Harry Mister sang. A member of the Com-munist Party's Artist Group discussed "Artist Problems Today" at the second meeting and this was followed by a talk the next week from Douglas Clark on "Arts and Letters." Roger Page gave an account of his recent tour of Australia at the most recent meeting.

AYLESBURY PPU Group have circularised the Local Education Committee. UNA Branch, Women's Guilds, Trades Unions, etc., urging these organisations to consider the grave international situation, explaining the policy of the PPU, and asking members to consider what action they can take to further the object of international peace. Vera Brittain is to give readings from her latest book, "In the Steps of John Bunyan," at a literary meeting in Walton Hall, Walton Street, Aylesbury, on Wednesday, Oct. 11. Admission is by ticket (1s.) which may be obtained from Ethel A. Lewis, The Manse, Brill, Aylesbury.

LEWISHAM: The new Peace Pledge Union Group invited Hugh Brock, Assistant Editor of Peace News, to give a talk on "Pacifist Action" last week at Catford. As a result of this meeting, the group has decided to embark on an intensive leaflet campaign in the Lewisham Area, and several hundred leaflets have already been distributed. These include the new Civil Defence pamphlet by Alex Comfort. The secretary is Alfred Harris, 6/355 The Highway, E.1.

ETHICS AND RELIGION

MEETING of the Religion Commission of the Peace Pledge Union's Steps to Peace Conference was held at Dick Sheppard House last Saturday, when Bernard Boothroyd, Editor of Peace News, gave an address on "The outlook for religious pacifism." Rowland Philcox was in the chair.

The speaker said he believed the outlook law and scientific law, and men would not or religious pacifism was the outlook for religion itself.

PIED

ACLACHLAN

Bernard

d in South

rth London

his conversion

ntinue serving

s, and his sub-our years' im-

rman of the

t for the new viding fellow

ave opportuni-

akers and the

re were sideng gift stalls,

etent palmist

largaret Bing-

refreshments

Peace Centre

erald Massey

c Rees of S.
sung by S.
ven by Alison

rving (piano), ind Eric Rees

Inn

or fine, Sybil steps of a pounding the

always there;

n offices in the

are regular ting. Without

eakers, people her, but Sybil asonably well

good humour

f a good open importance to

irn a vaguely

question into

on any topic rowd likes to

er remarks to

rea. She was that the pub-elections in ) per ceut

d an anti-rate. ler a foreign tild in Sybils of the U.S. and you have

nat no Euro-anything of es of "Here, Communists ey did offer

red economic

id not go and

ed the questing a lecture

o conduct its

go to Mos

shifted to e to make a ecause there ybil said.

ybil said.

iy's meeting
f the crowd
e. So much confounded toils of his

toils of his cheered her, out that we sceptical s of derision

. NEVER

NOTHER

St, WCI

nber. Is 1. Send business, ectly honest, f they could

held at

Firstly, he said, they had to define re-gion. The word was used very loosely. Teligion was not simply a matter of fer-our and devotion. Religion demanded a osmology, an explanation of the origin, purpose and laws of the universe. purpose and laws of the universe.

Men could have a cosmology without a leigion. But there was another essential requisite—worship; that is, the realisation hat the universe, by its very nature, must be the expression of a personal mind and will and that this person compelled away. and that this person compelled awe and adoration.

He doubted if materialism could compel hat. Awe, perhaps, but not adoration. Materialism was more likely to regard the owerse as an accident or a mistake—as ckO said, "A mistake that nobody made."

Religion today was a minority opinion. e lived in an age when man was trying to without religion; ignoring the spiritual wiverse; trying to establish rules of belaviour without reference to anything outside him is the state of t side himself.

There were, of course, laws which modern an did regard as inviolable and inexorae, operating universally outside man's will control-namely, the laws of nature, or

Ethics alone are not enough

Ethics, on the other hand, was regarded a separate kind of laws, which had no universal application.

That was why, in spite of his advance moral theory, personal and social, man as behaving as badly as ever—much to sown surprise. He did not believe moral aw was absolute.

Men were still saying "ethics is enough." But ethics was not enough. Ethics without religion left ethics without sanctions, without authority and therefore without

If morality was only a code invented by han, then man's faith in morality depended on his faith in himself. And it was a haracteristic of this age that man did not believe in himself. The literature and believe in himself. The literature and the distance of our time was one long, self-man's impotence in hiving moan about man's impotence in lace of forces he cannot control.

This principle—that morality must have sanctions-had been forgotten. We been taught Christian ethics in the oben taught Christian ethics in the one way, as if Christ gave them to us a something to try and do as well as we can just to please Him; or as unattainable the object in leisure moments Just to please nim, or as con-

hen we wanted a bit of uplift. The speaker believed that, on the con-ary, Christ had given us those laws as worable, scientific laws with inescapable and effect; on which the very exis-

There was no difference between moral have power to enforce their own moral principles until they regarded them as unalterable and universal.

If, for example, believing that "ethics was enough," you said to a man, "Love your neighbour as yourself" and he replied, "But I don't and I don't are "But I don't; and I don't see why I should," then what could you do?

There was only one thing you could do; show the universal application of that rule; that it was a scientific law, one of the laws on which life on the planet ultimately de-pended, without which there could be no individual freedom or social stability in short—that it was a natural law.

But by the time you had made him be-lieve that you would have given him a re-

The speaker commended to their consideration the old saying—"As men believe the universe to be, so will they behave."

Today men believed more than ever in personal responsibility, but because they believed that no-one is responsible for the universe they are behaving without re-

Because they believed there are no sanctions behind their principles they had no faith in those principles. There could be faith in moral law, ultimately, without faith in a law-giver.

As for the outlook for religious pacifism, they must judge that by what probability there was of men applying divine sanctions to one moral law in particular—the relation of means to ends.

Urgent problem of our age

Every age had its particular problem. Man was evolving all the time, and a law which was urgent to one generation was less urgent to the next. To our age the urgent problem was the realisation that means and ends were identical.

That was natural, as this was preeminently an age of means without ends. Men were getting bothered by the need to find ends for the various means they had invented; for they found that their means were running away with them like wild horses for lack of defined direction.

This would create an increasing desire to discover authoritative sanctions for the moral principles they believed in (peace, for instance); but had not yet found the power to apply. In that way the growing fear of war might evoke a new inquiry into the nature and source of spiritual power.

Pacifism—that is, the actual ending of war—might come before any religious re-It might come through sheer, automatic reaction against the obvious futility of war.

In that case it would not be the end of human and social tensions, and their Christian pacifism would have to be directed towards other forms of disarmament. | must be built.

INTRODUCING " PEACE BUILDERS"

Peace Building requires a new approach

BOTH the crisis of our age and the obvious lack of progress being made in the peace movement has caused many of us to reconsider our whole approach.

Peace Builders believe there are many within the peace and other social-action movements who are ready and anxious for a movement that is founded on a more embracing concept. Our movement seeks to encourage closely knit local service teams of people who want to make peace building a total way of life. Our aim is a movement that strengthens the existing peace organisations and broadens the concept of peace action by creative example and co-operative efforts.

The methods we have been using in the past have all made their contribution but they appear to be quite inadequate to produce the needed revolution in our economic, social and spiritual life. Our efforts to per-suade by argument are as futile as to convince a man not to jump to his death from a burning building when he is being scorched in a flaming inferno.

The only thing that can persuade the people to change their course is to convince them of a real, available, positive alternative. Until we actually demonstrate by actions which the public understand that there is an effective method of resisting evils and aggression our hysterical populations will continue the slaughter.

Conscientious objection to war has its value. But does it actually resist war when the objector's work, standard of living and whole way of life only further the warproducing social and economic maladjust-

We deny the inevitability of war. Yet have we not been trying to overcome by propaganda the very consequences that our economic and social life produce?

If we believe there is a moral law in the universe, can we criticise other people's making war while we continue to accept a standard of living that is maintained at the price of poverty, oppression and economic slavery for millions of colonial and subject peoples around the world?

Wilfred Wellock and others have pointed out for years that logical war resistance involves the development of a social order which does not, by its very nature, produce war. It seems that the day has come when peace makers can no longer be satisfied with just good will and denunciation of the war system. The blind love of so many pacifists may be as dangerous as the acts of a misguided mother. Our need today, in this complex massproduction civilisation, is not only a brotherly attitude but also a social-technical understanding of the involved social problems. Only by understanding the process of social change will we learn what kind of an economic and social system can and

A Peace Builders team has a balanced programme making it possible for the active participants to express this way of life corporately.

The study circle examines various successful social movements and tries to discover not only what constitutes a non-violent social order but also to understand what can be done by the group and by in-dividuals to sow seeds of this new social approach.

The service projects, some of which are manual, seek to face immediate problems not merely by alleviating the suffering but by helping the needy people get a new start in a creative environment—one which can a beginning of a more humane community.

The team members examine their fundamental personal values and attitudes and sometimes have group meditation. They also reach out to other socially creative groups in many parts of the world through correspondence, trips and eventually common conferences, work projects.

But we must start from where we are we recognise that a dynamic movement springing from the roots can not be organised by a few individuals. It must grow out of the needs, commitments and understanding of the people who make it live.

We believe that one of the best things we can do, therefore, is to help open-minded people broaden their understanding of constructive peace and social action by learning from the experiences of many groups and individuals in many parts of the world.

One of the most effective ways of making this possible is to help them travel, work and live with peace builders in other countries. Our movement is, therefore, developing a system, now covering 20 countries in Europe, Asia and America, to help guide socially conscious youth, who have the maturity to take care of themselves and the intitiative to plan and travel alone. By our "chain" of free two day hospitalities with community groups, experimental schools, religious groups and people who are peace leaders, co-operators, youth leaders, inter-racial leaders, etc., we believe we can not only make valuable international contacts but help those youth who already have a desire to serve their community, to broaden their horizons and gain courage and inspiration to return home and start beace building teams. We are, therefore, anxious to have the socially conscious readers of Peace News on our "open door" list. If you can offer at least a mattress on the floor for a foreign youth who would appreciate knowing your family for a couple of days, or if you want more details about the movement write to: Peace Builders, 36 Helloway Head, Birmingham 1.

BOB LUITWEILER

Notes for your Diary

be a free service, we reserve the control of the service as we reasonably can be reasonable to the reasonable reas Send notices to arrive not than Monday.

2 than Monday. Include: Date, TOWN, Time,

10 DON. W.C.2: 1.30-1.45. St. Martin-the Fig. 2: Intercession Service for the Rev. Alan Balding, APF, For, VERPOOL: 8 p.m. Friends Meeting Hunter St.: Annual General Meeting of the Toldas Group for the approval a constitution and the election of the Approval welcomed. 87 Non-members welcomed.

RI ALBANS: 8.0 p.m. Friends' Meet-Coltman: "The Church and Modern: FoR.

Saturday, October 7

Saturday, October 7

NOTTINGHAM: 3 p.m. Adult School
The Conference of the Conference of Conference

Meynolus on Mahatma Gandhi." Proand Sof.

LBANS: 5.30 p.m. Friends MeetBuse: Speaker: Rev. W. H. Foley: Conference: For.

LEANS: Foley:
College For.

Louise: Gordon C. White on Lancemarking: Gordon C. White on Lancemarking: Germany." 5.0 Tea:
Bartett. For.

Bartett. For.

Lower Church St.; Speaker: The Lancemary: Lakeland Area

Meeting: PPU.

Sunday October 8

Sunday, October 8

Monday, October 9

BIRMINGHAM: 7 p.m. Dick Sheppard House, 36 Holloway Head; Roger Page on his recent visit to Australia and the peace movement there; PPU.

Wednesday, October 11

than Monday.

Include: Date, TOWN, Time, twent. (hall, street); nature of steps. (and order and style.

Friday, October 6

Friday, October 6

There are a Rey Alva Balding APF For.

Thursday October 11

Wednesday, October 11

AYLESBURY: 7.15 p.m. Walton Hall: Vera Brittain; readings from "In the Steps of John Bunyan"; Admission 1s. Tickets from Ethel Lewis. The Manse. Brill Aylesbury, Bucks; PPU.

STEPNEY: 8 p.m. Stepney Green Underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstraction of the Price of Stepney Green underground station); First showing of new IVSP film: "Abstracti

Thursday, October 12 Thursday, October 12
HAMPSTEAD: 8 p.m. Friends House,
Heath St. (Hampstead Tube Station);
Roger Page: "Down Under"; Discussion;
Secretary: John Wynne-Tyson, 17a Pond
St., N.W.3. HAM 0174; PPU.
LONDON, W.C.2: 12.30 p.m. Lincoln's Inn Fields; Open-air Meeting; Sybil Morrison; PPU.

Friday, October 13

LONDON, W.C.1: 7.30 p.m. 6 Endsleigh Gardens: Reginald Reynolds on "Basic Education in India": Central London

Saturday, October 14 COLWYN BAY: 3.15 p.m. Friends Meet-ing House, Erskine Road: Speaker: Rev. Clifford H. Macquire; Area Conference of

ing House, Erskine Road; Speaker: Rev. Clifford H. Macquire; Area Conference of North Wales: FoR.

GLASGOW C.1.: 3 p.m. Community House, 214 Clyde Streit. Devotional meeting: Speaker, Rev. A. A. Bowyer. Bellshill, on "The Supremacy of Christ." FoR. SEVENOAKS: 3.30 and 6 p.m. Sevenoaks School of Dancing, Argyle Road, Speaker: Reginald Sorensen, MP. West Kent Area Conference, FoR.

HIGHGATE: 6.30 p.m. Syskon College, Milfield Lane. West Hill (2 minutes from Parliament Hill Fields Trolley hus terminus): Social gathering and concert; Refreshments; RSVP to Jim Legge, c/o Syskon College; IVSP.

KIDDERMINSTER: 3.39 p.m. Oxford Cafe; Speaker: Hugh Faulkner; Area Conference for North Worcsstershire; FoR.

GLASGOW: 2.30 p.m. St. Andrews.

GLASGOW: 2.30 p.m. St. Andrews Mid Hall (Berkeley St.); Conference of the Stop War Committee; See page 6.

Sunday, October 8

Spin PARK: 6.30 p.m Open-air meetASGOW Morrison, PPJ.

The meeting: PPU.

Root TR: 2.30 p.m. Friends MeetMODITH: 2.30 p.m. Friends MeetModith Reynolds on "The World PaciModith Reynolds on "The World PaciMonderance in India," PPU, FoR, and

Saturday, Oct. 14-Sunday, Uct. 15

MIDDLESBOROUGH: Ayton School:
Conference for boys between the ages of 16 and 18. Inroductory talks on "Provision of the Military Service Act." and Alternative Service," Applications not alter than October 6. to the Secretary, Northern Friends Board, Clifford Street, York, Sof.

Wednesday, October 18

LEEDS: 7.30 p.m. Friends Meeting House, Carlton Hill; Roger Page on "The Peace Movement in Australia"; PPU.

PPU. SAFFRON WALDEN: 7.30 p.m. Town Hall, Saffron Walden; Speakers: Prof. Kathleen Lonsdale and the Rev. Clifford Macquire; For. AYLESBURY: 7.15 p.m. Friends Meeting House; Speaker: Gwyneth Anderson; All welcome; PPU.

Thursday, October 19

CAMBRIDGE: 6.30 p.m. The Library, Wesley Church; Christ's Pieces; Speaker: Rev. Clifford Macquire; Details from Bernard Challis, Church Lane, Dullingham, Newmarket; Area Conference; FoR. COVENTRY: 7.30 p.m. 3 Stoke Avenue, Stoke Park. PPU.
SHEFFIELD: 7.30 p.m. Channing Hall, Surrey St.; CO Rally; Speaker: Roger Page; Refreshments.

Friday, October 20
LONDON, W.C.1: 7.30 p.m. 6 Endsleigh
Gardens: John Irwin, Assistant Keeper of Indian Section Victoria and Museum: Central London PPU.

Museum: Central London PPU.

Saturday, October 21

LONDON, W.C.2: 11 a.m. St. Martin'sin-the-Field; Holy Communion, to be followed at 2.15 p.m. by the Annual General Meeting; Anglican Pacifist Fellowship.

NORTHAMPTON: 6 p.m. Friends Meeting House Wellington St. (a turning off Akington St.); Bernard Boothroyd, Editor of Peace News, on "Pacifism and the Press"; Chairman: Rev. H. O. Evans; PPU. NOTTINGHAM: 3.15 p.m. Friends Meeting House, Friar Lane; Lyn Harris, Head-master of St. Christopher's School, Letch-worth, on "The Pacifist Approach to the Problems of Today"; Refreshments;

SWANSEA: 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. Friends Meeting House; Speaker: Clifford H. Mac-quire; Area Conference for West Glamorgan and South Carmarthen; FoR. SHEFFIELD: at "Hollowford": FoR weekend school: Details from Winifred Golding. 140 Hunter House Road: Sheffield, II. Saturday, Oct. 21-Sunday, Oct. 22

Monday, October 23

Monday, October 23
LONDON. W.C.1: 7.30 p.m. Conway
Hall. Red Lion Square: Piano recital by Frank Merrick in aid of Stepney Pacifist Service Unit; Works by Beethoven ("Appassionata"). Chopin. William Wordsworth and others; Tickets 2s. 6d. 4s. 6s.
10s. from Stepney PSU. 355 The Highway, E.1. Tel Royal 4664.

Saturday, October 28
SHEFFIELD: 3 p.m. Friends Meeting House, Woodhouse Lane; Yorkshire Area Meeting; PPU.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

PLEASE READ CAREFULLY

LATEST TIME for copy: Monday before publication. Cash with order. 3d. per word, minimum 2s. 6d. (Box No. 6d. extra). Please don't send stamps in payment, except for odd pence. Maximum length: 50 words. Address for Box No. replies: Peace News, 3 Blackstock Road, N.4. When corresponding with PN about an advertisement, quote its first words, classification, and date.

We reserve the right to hold over advertisements and to limit the frequency of continuing advertisements

MEETINGS

MEETINGS

ANNUAL REUNION for all COs. Friends Meeting House, Woodhouse Lane, Leeds 2, Saturday, October 28, 4 p.m. AGM. North Eastern Regional Board for COs. 5.30 p.m. Tea. 1s. 6d. per person. 6.30 p.m. Public meeting. Stanley F. Sweet, "Pacifism and Communism" Questions and discussion. Collection for funds of local advisory committee. WEIGH HOUSE Church. Duke Street, W.1. (Bond St. Tube). Sund evenings at 7. The Gospel of Peace! Social hour follows.

ACCOMMODATION

COMFORTABLE HOME offered to remiddle-aged widower. Ref. pre-Folkestone, Box 211. OD ACCOMMODATION offered GOOD (child) return some attention man S-W London. Reasonable. Box 213.

DERBYSHIRE HILLS, Vegetarian Guest House. Rest and comfort amid beautiful scenery. Arthur and Catherine Ludlow, The Briars, Crich, Near Matlock. Tel: Ambergate 44.

SEE THE Autumn colourings in Lakeland. Highfield Vegetarian Guest House, The Heads, Keswick, offers magnificent views, interesting meals and friendly atmosphere. Open all the year round. Booking for Christmas and New Year. Write Anne Horner, Tel. 508.

YOUNG LOCAL Government Officer would appreciate offer of simple accommodation and breakfasts in Birmingham area. Noel Hustler, 27 Broadmere Road Ipswitch.

PERSONAL

PERSONAL

MARRIAGE BUREAU offers unrivalled personal service. Nation-wide clientels.

Mary Élair (Reem 59), 147 Holborn. E.C.1

WORKING FOR peace in October? In 11 countries this summer international volunteer groupe doing practical work for communities in need, have made positive contribution to creation of peaceful society. Members and sympathisers are reminded OCTOBER is set aside for special moneyraising efforts to extend this work. Information International Voluntary Service for Peace, 3 Cromwell Road, London, S.W.7.

LITERATURE. &c.

QUAKERISM Information and Literature respecting the Faith and Practice of the Religious Society of Friends, free on application to the Friends' Home Service Committee, Friends' House, Euston Rd..

London.

HOUSMANS BOOKSHOP can supply promptly all your book requirements from Penguins to Encyclopedias. Book tokens issued and exchanged. Mail order service our speciality. Send for latest list. Housmans Bookshop (in association with Peace News), 3 Blackstock Road, London, N.4.

SITUATIONS AND WORK WANTED GESTETNER DUPLICATING, every variety. Mabel Eyles, 395 Hornsey Road, London, N.19. ARC 1765/MOU 1701.

MISCELLANEOUS

WAR RESISTERS' International wal-comes gifts of foreign stamps an un-damaged air mail covers. Please send to WRI, Lansbury House, 88 Park Avenue, Bush Hill Park, Enfield, Middlesex.

Peace News is open for the expression of all points of view relevant to pacifism. Articles in it, whether signed or unsigned, do not necessarily represent the policy of the Peace Pledge Union, of which it is the weekly organ. Nor does the acceptance of advertisements imply any endorsement of, or PPU connection with, the matter advertised.

PLEASE HAND THIS TO YOUR NEWSAGENT Please deliver PEACE NEWS to me weekly

То М
(Newsagent's name)
Name

Note to Newsagent—PEACE NEWS is published weekly as a national newspaper at the retail price of 3d. It is obtainable by your wholesaler at the usual rates from the Publishers, at 3 Blackstock Road, London, N.4.

Up and doing! OUR TARGET

THIS flimsy issue of PEACE NEWS will remind readers of the bad old days when we charged them threepence for a penny-size paper.

Does it also remind you that the Peace News campaign for 12,500 readers by the end of this year is still far snort of its target, with only three months to go?

This is the time of year when meetings and opportunities for making new contacts are at a maximum. If only one reader in ten gains another this month we shall be 1,000 nearer the

A single reader determined on success could invert the ratio and get ten from one in this time!

12,500 regular readers by December 31 will pay the printing bill (but only that) for the two extra pages ou normally get.

Make a special effort NOW to get new readers for the bigger Peace News. Extra copies for free distribution can be posted direct to you for 1s. 6d. a dozen (plus postage 4d.). Publicity material in wide variety is available free. H.F.M.

Circulation last week 10,800

陳代 陳代 陳代 陳代 陳代 陳代 郑代 Printing delays have held back despatch

Christmas Cards

-we apologise, but are glad to tell you supplies have now arrived.

If not already ordered, send now for SAMPLE 35. SET

(10 cards, including painting card) and particulars

ENDSLEIGH CARDS

(Peace News Ltd.)

3 Blackstock Rd., London, N.4 陳代明代明代明代明代明代

* * * * * * * * * Survival depends on the choice between acquisitive society and a co-operative,

non-violent world. WILFRED WELLOCK

GANDHI AS A SOCIAL REVOLUTIONARY

Reports in full

the findings of the Social Order and Basic Education Committee (which he chaired) of the World Pacifist Conference, visits to Gandhian Village Industries' Centres in S. India, discussion with Gandhi's co-workers, and measures Western materialism against the challenge of Gandhian economics.

A booklet every pacifist should read

10 pages. 1s. 1d. post free. (10s. 6d. dozen, post free) 40 pages.

HOUSMANS BOOKSHOP 3 Blackstock Road London N.4

* * * * * * * * *

SPECIAL OFFER ENDING

The special offer by which members of the Peace Pledge Union and other Pacifist organisations could obtain copies of Denis Hayes' great book

CONSCRIPTION CONFLICT

plus 6d. for postage

will be withdrawn on the 31st October, 1950

after which date the full price of 12s. 6d. and sixpence will have to be paid. If you have not secured copies at the special rate send now, cash with order to:

SHEPPARD PRESS LIMITED 3, Blackstock Road, London, N.4

PEACEMAKING IN EDUCATION

Worry about the parents

MEMBERS of the Education Commission of the Peace Pledge Union and interested friends, met under the Chairmanship of Miss Florence Surfleet at Friends House, London, on Saturday, Sept. 30, for a half-day conference, in the desire to see more clearly how the pacifist teacher and parent can best meet the situations of difficulty that the child presents to the adult.

It was a widely representative gathering, consisting of parents, teachers of varying experience, and others, including the editor of a magazine on Child Education and workers from nursery schools and Youth

The exchange of ideas and experience in an informal way during the long tea in-terval played a very important part in knitting the whole together, and the discussion after each speech proved to be

Mr. Anthony Weaver, who is beginning a new post as warden of Ponds Home School for Maladjusted Children under the National Association for Montal Machine National Association for Mental Health, was the first speaker.

"As a pacifist I feel that war is the greatest delinquent activity," he said,
"Government violence and destruction make so-called juvenile delinquency child's play."

The aim of education was the "generation of happiness," and the maladjusted child was one because he had not had his basic needs satisfied. In dealing with him we had to try and remedy what had been missed before, and we could do this largely by supplying opportunities for creative activities in play, as well as for learning.

Guns and aggressive play

Discussion dealt with the question of guns and aggessive play. Some speakers felt that all children passed through such a stage, while others thought that this was unnecessary, given enough creative

Mr. Raymond O'Malley, Senior English Master at Dartington Hall School, said there was no legitimate way by which a pacifist dealing with children could be sure that they would later sign the peace pledge. Pacifism was not a dogma but an attitude, a way of looking at life.

It was a kind of conversion or discipline, but the person to be converted was oneself, and it was up to education to strengthen the love impulses and to release the effect subconscious destructive urges.

When a child played with a toy gun, he said, he was expressing his need to get rid of an enemy, not outside, but inside himself, and was going through a necessary stage. He should be helped to canalise that energy, without any sense of guilt, in creative activities. If there was much bullying in a school, there was something vitally wrong with the school.

Atfer the tea interval, Mrs. Cora Southgate of Luton, the mother of three children, said that you could not make anyone a pacifist but you could try to provide such an environment that the child would develop into a pacifist.

She and her husband had tried to give the sense of security which led to an absence of fear. When children used guns she thought they were wanting to show that they could stand up against things of which they were afraid, but with her own children she did not remember any fighting. The children had been encouraged to take pleasure in doing their own share of helping in the home, which led to the development of self-discipline and a sense of responsibility.

> STOP WAR COMMITTEE Chairman: Annie D. Maxton

> > CONFERENCE

will be held in

ST. ANDREW'S MID HALL (Berkeley St.) on Saturday, 14th October, at 2.30 p.m. Supporting organisations: FoR. ILP, NCL, PPU, USM, WIL, WOF.

Delegation Fees: Individual Delegates 1s.
Three Delegates 2s. 6d.
Visitors will be welcome. Tickets 1s.

AGAINST ALL MILITARISM

Tickets on application to:
48 DUNDAS STREET, GLASGOW, C.1.

Peace News Campaign

All S. Midlands readers of Peace News should make a point of hearing

Bernard J. Boothroyd

Editor of "Peace News" "Yaffle" of "Reynolds News"

at a Public Meeting on

PEACE and the PRESS Saturday, Oct. 21 at 6.0 p.m.

Friends Meeting House Wellington St., Northampton

Chairman: Rev. H. O. Evans, B.Sc.

Particulars from the organiser: Alison Coles, 28 Hillside Rd., Wellingborough

— not toy guns

Creative imagination was very important for children, and her own had had loads of bricks and oddments of all sizes and shapes for constructive play. The family was a musical one and she thought that music was the greatest ground for the develop-ment of the imagination. There had been a very special feeling on comradeship extended to them by friends when the father was imprisoned as a CO during the war. This feeling was later increased by the visits of German PoWs and now they were entertaining German, Greek and Italian children. That way her children had come to see that all nationali-room for fear or suspicion. Mrs. Southgate had been so successful in her methods, that all three children had become pacifists, the two boys having registered as COs.

ties were the same and that there was no

Another conference planned

There will be a further conference at Friends House, London, on Nov. 4, when Miss Winifred Wood of Sheerness, a teacher with long experience of large classes, will speak on Discipline in the Large Class.

This period is to be devoted rather to the sharing of experience than to the formula tion of principles and ideas, and it should throw light on the problems of parents and teachers of small classes as well.

Parents, particularly those who have their children in large classes, need to understand sympathetically the problems of the teacher of such a class, in order to co-operate with him or her in the wise education of the child. The pacifist teacher, of course, welcomes warmly the co-operation of the parent.

YUGOSLAVIA

(Continued from page one)

quiries without the presence of any representative of the authorities.

"The interpreters supplied by the Yugoslav Government were helpful and efficient, but we had enough Serbo-Croat among us not to be dependent on interpreters. We were agreeably surprised by the frankness with which people spoke to us and by the spontaneity of their answers.

"We investigated carefully such specific charges as we were able to find in Cominform publicity. We inspected both ports on the island of Korcula and were unable to find the remotest trace of military activity.

"We carried out a full investigation of the military aerodrome at Nish, as usual choosing our own witnesses, and are satisfied that there have not been and are no Western officers at the aerodrome and that it is not being adapted for heavy bombers or

"We enquired everywhere and looked everywhere for any indication of the presence of American or other Western officers or military advisers, but found no trace whatever. We saw a certain amount of old American or British motor transport, and a few Hurricanes and Spitfires, but no modern western military equipment except for one fairly new jeep, which we were told had been bought at Trieste . . ."

The Press Conference was told that oviet charges that the Belgrade-Zagreb highway (The Brotherhood-Unity highway partly built by an international brigade) had been built for military purposes, was fortified, and made adaptable for the landing of American bombers were unfounded. Stuart Morris and another member of the delegation had traversed the whole length of the highway and apart from three old of the highway and apart from three old German pill boxes erected on the outskirts of Zagreb during the war and before the road was planned, there was no sign whatever of fortifications.

Although it was possible for aircraft to make use of any concrete roads for landing and taking off, 20 foot width of the Brother-hood highway would not be regarded as usable, except in an emergency, for any large types of bombers.

Welfare of minorities

Charges that Albanian and Bulgarian minorities had been either massacred or persecuted were likewise proved unfounded. A high degree of cultural autonomy was granted; the minorities had their own schools, their own language and seemed happy in their new environment. There was a wide range of literature available in the languages of the minorities.

There was no doubt that Yugoslavia adhered to the Communist ideology, several members of the delegation declared. Sidney Bailey had read with interest the minutes of the Worker's Council in a large factory, noting the genuine discussion of various problems and the decisions reached by the workers themselves.

A Peace News correspondent with a knowledge of Serbo-Croat is still in Yugo-slavia and will be reporting in a future Sybil Morrison's

CAMPAIGN COLUMN

Meanwhile, let none of us forget that we owe the cheerful chances of today to the men who fought and died in Kores to defend world order and peace

-Sunday Times, October 1, 1950.

From the standpoint of the free nations the significance of the Communist aggression is not one whit lessened because it has been quickly punished in a masterly campaign. The salutary lesson which the men of the Kremlin have been taught may change their tactics. but it will not change their hearts of their nefarious designs. If the swift victory in Korea were made the signal for any slackening of our defensive efforts defeat could not have been more

-Daily Telegraph, Sept. 30, 1950

IF General MacArthur's advance to and beyond the 38th Parallel proves to be defeat for the North Korean armies, this victory will undoubtedly be used as propaganda for the argument that force is only way to keep the peace in a world threatened with total war.

The war in Korea, we shall be told, has been successfully "localised," and because the so-called United Nations' forces have been victorious the rights and wrongs of the dispute need no longer be argued. Conditional surrender" has been resurreconditional surrender" has been resurrented as the slogan of the day; the unification of Korea, for which incidentally, the North Koreans were also alleged tally, the North Koreans were also alleged to be fighting will now be undertaken by the United Nations, it being understood that the North Koreans wanted will be to be the control of the c Koreans wanted unification for the wrong reasons and under the wrong regime.

The question of who is to be the judge of what is right and what is wrong is the process of being settled by force of

The pacifist is faced with this argumen whenever there is a victory for arms, yeif Russia had thrown into the Koresbattle the whole of its great air force and a small fraction of the state and a small fraction of the millions of its men who are supposed to be under armit can be conjectured that General Management Arthur's army might have been driven must be sea. What would have been proved it this had happened is the same as what is proved now, no more and no less; that one side was stronger than the other, not the one side was right and the other side wrong

No pacifist could say more

The pacifist position is unaltered by this The pacifist position is unaltered by trial of strength in the Far East, and it is significant that a paper such as the Daily Telegraph cannot make any case at all of MacArthur's victory, the Editorial Saturday exhorting its readers to understand that, in fact, peace had not been secured, world order had not been defended, and victorious arms had brought no change and victorious arms had brought no charge of heart. No pacifist could say more!

To demand "unconditional surrender, which proved such a large of the country of the countr which proved such a boomerang at call end of the second world war, and to upon the nation never to relax for moment in the terrific race in armament is hardly a hopeful comment is hardly a hopeful comment on the result of victory, nor an inspiring epitaph those "men who fought and died Korea."

For thousands of years nations and Em pires have tried to settle disputes by going to war and it has been disputed by going to war, and it has been constantly argued that the world cannot be ruled by good is alone. Since this has never been tried, there is no proof, whereas the proof of leading to wars is clear for every person to see. The case for war can be assailed from all sides for even when vice assailed from all sides, for even when victory is won there is still no end to it, it the pacifist case is unassailable, based as is upon good and not upon the everlasting ly shifting sands of evil.

ly shifting sands of evil.

Many people, though not yet entirely convinced, are turning towards us, and it for pacifists to keep the light of their faith undimmed and brightly shining show the way. This is our task.

Emrys Hughes, M.P.

writes every week in

FORWARD

On sale everywhere — Friday 2d. Postal subscription 13s. yearly from FORWARD, 26 Civic Street, Glasgow, C.4.

Peace News Ltd. Printed by W. F. Clifford Printing
Co. Ltd. (T.U.) London. N.16. Published from 3 Blackstock Rd., London,

No. 746

ABO Al

A REN"
peac
do?" So asked neeting of owship at ast week. And were v be too smug the blame asians!

"You car the world i and war-mo Because the unders, it di oreign policy at time ther the world a d a deep lon emove the fea He was no ent's defend

If Mr. Sh answerable proposals, and policy, he sai "But the the Party's views on rethere is a

Mey was in

way our fo the peace he said which w people.

"We, as S densive," I ne people unists who Though he not a poli munists a in that the cent.

hilding a He Wanted on arma Vice Dousing pr

In anoth reliare stat Mr. Hughes en were retu The Britis with their hear the rearmy, we Mrs. C. S. oke of the ple had m with the hent and people, we the to get to vernment: with a comr

We must lo disation, sa sufficient we are of to do.

If we are addish und to other ing to other live and en expect.

The chairm for Leyton the world The sures Curtai

THE are to b Suffolk The w pleasant.